Twelve African American Members of the SCS: The First Five Decades (1875-1925). In this pamphlet, Michele Valerie Ronnick describes the context and discourse around educating Classics to those who were seen as the lower ranks of American society. Ronnick depicts these twelve members’ stories, their lives and their careers in the first five decades of the newly established Society. Their lives are interesting in themselves and shed light on the heated debates over the education of newly freed slaves during Reconstruction and into the 20th century.

Careers for Classicists in Today’s World. Kenneth F. Kitchell, Jr., designed this brochure (2012) to acquaint undergraduate students, and their advisers with the abundance of career paths open to students who pursue degrees in Classics. New versions are forthcoming.
